Dear

This letter responds to a request for a ruling dated May 13, 2005 and submitted on behalf of Taxpayer, asking for a ruling involving an incentive stock option plan. Specifically, a ruling is requested that the adoption of the amendment approved on Date 2 results in a deemed re-adoption of the plan such that an incentive stock option (ISO) granted under the plan prior to Date d will satisfy the 10 year time period limitation of section 422(b)(2) of the Code.

Taxpayer originally adopted the Plan on Date 1; Taxpayer's shareholders approved the Plan on that same date. On Date 2, Taxpayer's board of directors adopted an amendment to the Plan subject to shareholder approval; this amendment was subsequently approved by Taxpayer's shareholders on Date 3. This amendment increased the maximum aggregate number of shares that could be issued under the Plan. At the time the amendment was approved, the plan provided that no ISOs could be issued after Date 4.

On Date 5, Taxpayer's Board of Directors adopted an amendment to the Plan extending the period in which ISOs could be issued under the plan. This amendment was not approved by Taxpayer's shareholders. The amendment provided that no ISOs could be issued under the plans after Date 6.

Section 421(a) of the Code provides that, if a share of stock is transferred to an individual in a transfer in respect of which the requirements of section 422(a) are met, (i) no income results to the individual at the time of the transfer of the share to individual on exercise of the option; (ii) no deduction under section 162 is allowable at any time to the employer corporation or its parent or subsidiary corporations with respect to the share transferred; and (iii) no amount other than the price paid under the option is considered as received by such corporations for the share transferred.

Section 422 of the Code provides that section 421 applies to the transfer of stock to an individual pursuant to the exercise of an ISO if (i) no disposition of the stock is made by the employee within two years from the date of the grant of the option or within one year from the date the stock is transferred to the individual; and (ii) at all times during the period beginning on the date the option is granted and ending three months before the date of its exercise, the optionee was an employee of either the corporation granting the option, a parent or subsidiary of such corporation, or a corporation or a parent or subsidiary corporation of such corporation issuing or assuming an option in a transaction to which section 424(a) applies.

Section 422(b)(2) defines an ISO as an option granted to an individual for any reason connected with his employment by a corporation, if granted by the employer corporation or its parent or subsidiary corporation, to purchase stock of any of such corporations, but only if, among other requirements, such option is granted within 10 years from the date such plan is adopted, or the date such plan is approved by the stockholders, whichever is earlier.

Section 1.422-2(a)(2)(ii) of the Income Tax Regulations provides that to qualify as an ISO, an option must be granted within 10 years from the date of the adoption of the plan or the date such plan is approved by the stockholders, whichever is earlier. In addition to this rule, section 1.422-2(c) of the regulations provides that to grant an ISO after the expiration of the 10-year period, a new plan must be adopted and approved.

Section 1.422-2(b)(2)(i) of the regulations provides that the plan must be approved by the stockholders of the corporation granting the ISO within 12 months before or after the date such plan is adopted. Ordinarily, a plan is adopted when it is approved by the granting corporation's board of directors, and the date of the board's action is the reference point for determining whether the stockholder approval occurs within the 24-month period. However, if, as is the case here, the board's action is subject to a condition (such as stockholder approval) or the happening of a specific event, the plan is adopted on the date the condition is met or the event occurs, unless the board's resolution fixes the date of approval as the date of the board's action.

Section 1.422-2(b)(2)(iii) of the regulations provides that the provisions relating the maximum aggregate number of shares to be issued under the plan and the employees (or class or classes of employees) eligible to receive options under the plan are the only provisions of a stock option plan that, if changed, must be re-approved by stockholders for purposes of section 422(b)(1). Any increase in the maximum number of shares that may be issued under the plan (other than an increase merely reflecting a change in the number of outstanding shares, such as a stock dividend or stock split), or a change in the designation of the employees (or class or classes of employees) eligible to receive options under the plan is considered the adoption of a new plan requiring stockholder approval within the prescribed 24-month period.

Based solely on the information submitted, the amendment approved by Corporation's shareholders on Date 3 results in the deemed re-adoption of the Plan as a new plan such that options granted under the Plan, at any time within 10 years from the date of that shareholder approval, satisfy the 10-year period limitation of section 422(b)(2) of the Code.
