Dear

This responds to your letter dated December 30, 2011, requesting rulings regarding the tax consequences of a proposed transaction involving Trust. The assets in Trust are currently held to provide retiree life insurance benefits to Union-represented retirees. The transaction addressed in this ruling would permit the assets in Trust also to be used to provide retiree health benefits to Union-represented retirees.

FACTS

Taxpayer is organized as a Delaware corporation and was formed through the merger of several companies. Taxpayer is the successor of Company A, Company B, and Company C.

Xxxxxxx Xxxxxx Xxxx

Taxpayer provides life, health, and other welfare benefits to its active and retired employees (and their eligible spouses and dependents) through several welfare benefit plans, including Plan A. Plan A is an umbrella welfare benefit plan that provides medical, dental, vision, and life insurance benefits to certain active and retired Union-represented employees of Taxpayer and its affiliates through several component plans. Plan B, a component plan under Plan A, provides group term life insurance to retired employees of Company A who were, before their retirement, represented by Unions. Plan C, consisting of two component plans under Plan A, provides retiree medical and dental benefits to retired employees of Company A who were, before their retirement, represented by Unions.

Taxpayer and its predecessors negotiated the benefits currently provided under Plans B and Plan C through arm's-length bargaining with Unions. The benefits under these plans are provided under a series of collective bargaining agreements that were in effect when the covered individuals retired. The collective bargaining agreements satisfy the requirements of section 7701(a)(46).

Trust has received a determination letter indicating that it is a voluntary employees' beneficiary association under section 501(c)(9). The assets held in Trust were originally accumulated in retired lives reserves maintained as separate accounts under group-term life insurance policies issued to Company A's predecessor, Company D, and its affiliates. Effective Date 1, when Company D spun off Company A and the other companies, Company D allocated the policy reserves among the spun-off companies. Company A established Trust effective Date 2, and policy reserves attributable to Union-represented retirees covered by Plan B were transferred from the life insurance companies to Trust. The assets in Trust are attributable entirely to the policy reserves accumulated before 1984 and transferred to Company A by Company D, and no contributions have been made to Trust other than the transferred policy reserves attributable to Union-represented retirees covered by Plan B.

Company A amended Trust effective Date 3 to permit Trust to provide health benefits, as well as life benefits, for non-management retirees and their beneficiaries. The authority conferred by the Date 3 amendment has not been used. To date, all of the assets in Trust have been held in a reserve to provide retiree life insurance benefits for Union-represented retirees under Plan B. No assets of Trust have been used to pay retiree health benefits. The transaction addressed in the ruling request would permit the assets in Trust to be transferred to the retiree health reserve in Trust and used to provide retiree health benefits for Union-represented retirees who are covered by Plan A.

Taxpayer represents that:

- 1. All of the assets in Trust are derived from contributions originally made to retired lives reserves before 1984, and no contributions have been made to Trust other than the transferred policy reserves attributable to Union-represented retirees covered by Plan B.
- 2. Trust is a separate welfare benefit fund that provides only retiree life insurance benefits pursuant to collective bargaining agreements as described in section 419A(f)(5). The retiree health reserve will be a separate welfare benefit fund under a collective bargaining agreement as described in section 419A(f)(5), and assets to be transferred to the retiree health reserve will provide retiree health benefits pursuant to collective bargaining agreements as described in section 419A(f)(5).

- 3. Amounts contributed to the retired lives reserves were deducted when made under section 162, and would have been fully deductible under section 162 if the contributions had in fact been made to provide post-retirement health benefits.
- 4. Under the terms of Trust and consistent with the prohibited inurement rules of section 501(c)(9), Taxpayer is prevented from recovering assets held in Trust.

RULINGS REQUESTED

Taxpayer has requested that the Service rule as follows:

- The transfer of assets from the retiree life insurance reserve to the retiree health reserve in Trust will not cause Taxpayer to include any amount in gross income under section 61.
- 2. The use of transferred assets to provide medical and dental benefits to Union-represented retirees covered by Plan C will not cause Taxpayer to include any amount in gross income under section 61.
- 3. The transfer of assets from the retiree life insurance reserve to the retiree health reserve in Trust, and the use of the transferred assets to provide retiree health benefits, will not result in any "disqualified benefit" within the meaning of section 4976(b)(1)(C), and will not, in and of itself, cause Taxpayer to be liable for the excise tax imposed by section 4976.

LAW

Section 61(a) provides that, unless otherwise excepted, gross income includes all income from whatever source derived.

Section 111(a) provides that gross income does not include income attributable to the recovery during the taxable year of any amount deducted in any prior taxable year to the extent such amount did not reduce the amount of tax imposed by Chapter 1 of the Code. Generally, the tax benefit rule requires a taxpayer who received a tax benefit from a deduction in an earlier year to recognize income in a later year if an event occurs that is fundamentally inconsistent with the premise on which the deduction was initially based. Hillsboro National Bank v. Commissioner, 460 U.S. 370 (1983); see also Hughes & Luce, LLP v. Commissioner, 70 F.3d 16 (5th Cir. 1995), cert. denied, 517 U.S. 1208 (1996). The term "tax benefit rule" encompasses two concepts, an inclusionary part and an exclusionary part. Frederick v. Commissioner, 101 T.C. 35, 40-41 (1993). The inclusionary part has been developed in the courts and requires a taxpayer to include a previously deducted amount in the current year's income when a fundamentally inconsistent event has occurred. The exclusionary part is partially codified at section 111(a) and permits a taxpayer to exclude an amount that did not previously provide a tax benefit when it was deducted; the exclusionary part cannot apply unless the inclusionary part applies.

The tax benefit rule allays some of the inflexibilities of the annual accounting system under specific circumstances. Hillsboro National Bank, 460 U.S. at 377. The general purpose of the tax benefit rule is to approximate the results produced by a tax system based on transactional rather than annual accounting. Id. at 381. The tax benefit rule will "cancel out" an earlier deduction when a later event is "fundamentally inconsistent" with the premise on which the deduction was initially based, even in situations where there is no actual recovery of funds. Id. at 381-383. One must consider the facts and circumstances of each case in light of the purpose and function of the provisions granting the deductions. Id. at 385. Although it is usually helpful to determine whether the later event would have foreclosed the deduction if it had occurred within the same tax year, that inquiry is not an exclusive test. See American Mutual Life Insurance Co. v. United States, 267 F.3d 1344, 1350 (Fed. Cir. 2001).

Section 162(a) provides, in part, that there shall be allowed as a deduction all the ordinary and necessary expenses paid or incurred during the taxable year in carrying on any trade or business.

Section 1.162-10 provides, in part, that amounts paid or accrued within the taxable year for a sickness, accident, hospitalization, medical expense, or similar benefit plan, are deductible under section 162(a) if they are ordinary and necessary expenses of the trade or business.

Section 1.162-10T, Q&A-2, provides that section 419 generally applies to contributions paid or accrued with respect to a welfare benefit fund after December 31, 1985, in taxable years of employers ending after that date.

Section 419(a) provides that contributions paid or accrued by an employer to a welfare benefit fund are not deductible under Chapter 1, but if they would otherwise be deductible, are (subject to the limitation of section 419(b)) deductible under section 419 for the taxable year in which paid.

Section 419(e)(1) defines the term "welfare benefit fund" to include any fund through which the employer provides welfare benefits to employees or their beneficiaries. The term "fund" is defined in section 419(e)(3) to include an organization described in section 501(c)(9), and also, to the extent provided in regulations, any account held for an employer by any person.

Section 1.419-1T, Q&A-2(a) of the regulations, provides that section 419 generally applies to contributions paid or accrued with respect to a welfare benefit fund after December 31, 1985, in taxable years of employers ending after that date.

Section 4976(a) imposes a 100 percent excise tax if an employer maintains a welfare benefit fund and there is a disqualified benefit provided during any taxable year.

Section 4976(b)(1)(C) defines "disqualified benefit" to include any portion of a welfare benefit fund reverting to the benefit of the employer.

Section 4976(b)(3) provides that section 4976(b)(1)(C) does not apply to any amount attributable to a contribution to the fund that is not allowable as a deduction under section 419 for the taxable year or any prior taxable year.

In Revenue Ruling 73-599, 1973-2 C.B. 40, modified by Rev. Rul. 77-92, 1977-1 C.B. 41, the issue was whether the balance in a retired lives reserve had to be included in the gross income of the employer in the taxable year in which the employer terminated the insurance contract. The balance was attributable to premiums paid by the employer and interest increments added by the insurance company. At the time it terminated the insurance contract, the employer directed that the insurance carrier should transfer the balance in the retired lives reserve to a trust qualified as a VEBA under section 501(c)(9). The employer had deducted the premiums paid into a retired lives reserve during the years when it was maintaining the insurance contract for the benefit of its employees. The insurance contract provided that, upon cancellation or other termination of the contract, any balance in the retired lives reserve could be distributed to the employer as a dividend or, at the employer's option, transferred to a trust qualified under section 501(c)(9) for the purpose of providing insurance coverage for retired employees. Under these facts, the ruling holds that the balance in the retired lives reserve was includable in the employer's gross income under section 61(a) in the year of the transfer. The ruling states that, because the insurance contract gave the employer a fixed right to receive the balance in the retired lives reserve in the year in which it terminated its coverage under the policy, that balance was includable in the employer's gross income for the year of the termination, notwithstanding the fact that the employer directed the insurance company to transfer the money to a section 501(c)(9) trust. The ruling also holds that, in those cases in which the tax benefit rule under section 111 applies, the rule applies only to that part of the balance that was accumulated out of premiums; it does not apply to that part of the accumulated balance that is the interest increments.

Similarly, in Revenue Ruling 77-92, a corporate employer with a group term insurance program that included a retired lives reserve had the option to discontinue the insurance coverage and to direct the insurance carrier to use the amount in the retired lives reserve either to pay premiums for insurance on the lives of retired employees or to pay a dividend to the employer. The employer terminated the insurance contract and directed the insurance carrier to transfer the balance in the retired lives reserve to another insurance company to purchase insurance for retired employees. The ruling states that the facts presented are in substance the same as those contained in Rev. Rul. 73-599, except that the right reserved to the employer in Rev. Rul. 77-92 to transfer the funds remaining in the retired lives reserve consisted of the right to direct payment to those funds to another insurance company rather than to a trust that qualified for exemption under section 501(c)(9). However, this difference was not considered material because the taxpayer's right of control over the retired lives reserve was substantially the same in both cases. Accordingly, the ruling concludes that the same basic federal income tax rules apply to the transfers in the two cases. The ruling also states that the portion of the transferred reserve accumulated out of premiums paid or incurred in taxable years ending after June 17, 1969, is not includible in the employer's income because such premiums were not deducted since the employer retained the right of recapture.

ANALYSIS AND CONCLUSION

RULING REQUESTS 1 AND 2:

In this case, with regard to the transfer of assets from the existing retiree life insurance reserve to a retiree health reserve within Trust, Taxpayer represents that there are provisions prohibiting the reversion of any Trust assets to Taxpayer. The provisions precluding Taxpayer from receiving a reversion distinguishes this case from the situations considered in Rev. Ruls. 73-599 and 77-92. Therefore, because Taxpayer does not have any right to a reversion of the existing retiree life insurance reserve that will be transferred to a retiree health reserve within Trust, such transfer will not cause Taxpayer to realize income under section 61 with respect to the balance attributable to earnings on the retired lives reserve. Also, with respect to the balance attributable to contributions, Taxpayer will not have income from the transfer unless the inclusionary part of the tax benefit rule otherwise applies. As discussed below, the inclusionary part of the tax benefit rule will not apply with respect to contributions.

As stated above, the tax benefit rule is implicated when a taxpayer has taken a deduction in a prior year, and in a subsequent year an event occurs that is fundamentally inconsistent with the premise of the deduction. The facts and circumstances of each case must be considered "in light of the purpose and function of the provisions granting the deductions." Hillsboro National Bank, 460 U.S. at 385.

The proposed transaction involves using assets attributable to contributions made before 1984. Any deductions for those contributions would have been taken by Company D under section 162, limited by the rules set out in Rev. Rul. 69-382, Rev. Rul. 69-478, and Rev. Rul. 73-599. For deductions taken under section 162 for a contribution to a welfare benefit fund, no distinction was made between the types of post-retirement welfare benefits provided through the fund. Thus, the original deductions would not have been foreclosed merely because the reserve amounts could be used for post-retirement health benefits.

Taxpayer has represented that all of the contributions to the retiree life insurance reserve would have been fully deductible under section 162 if the contributions had in fact been made to provide post-retirement health benefits. Based on Taxpayer's representation, the original deductions would not have been foreclosed had the proposed transaction occurred in the taxable year of the deductions. Moreover, this approach is consistent with the purpose and function of the law prior to the enactment of section 419. Accordingly, transferring funds from the retiree life insurance reserve attributable to contributions that were originally made to fund post-retirement life insurance, in order to now fund post-retirement health benefits, is not fundamentally inconsistent with the deductions taken in previous years with respect to those assets. Therefore, the inclusionary part of the tax benefit rule will not apply with respect to the contributions. We conclude that the tax benefit rule does not require Taxpayer to include any amount in income as a result of the transfer and use of transferred assets to provide retiree health benefits to Union-represented retirees under the proposed transaction.

RULING REQUEST 3:

Taxpayer represents that all of the assets in Trust are attributable to contributions made before 1985. Under section 4976(b)(3), section 4976(b)(1)(C) does not apply to amounts attributable to contributions to a fund that were not allowable as a deduction under section 419. Accordingly, amounts attributable to contributions made prior to the effective date of section 419 are not subject to the section 4976(b)(1)(C) excise tax. Consequently, the transfer of assets from the retiree life insurance reserve to the retiree health reserve in Trust, and the use of the transferred assets to provide retiree health benefits, will not result in a "disqualified benefit" within the meaning of section 4976(b)(1)(C), and therefore will not in and of itself cause Taxpayer to be liable for the excise tax imposed by section 4976.

RULINGS:

Based on the information submitted, representations made, and the authorities cited above, we conclude that:

- The transfer of assets from the retiree life insurance reserve to the retiree health reserve in Trust will not cause Taxpayer to include any amount in gross income under section 61.
- 2. The use of transferred assets to provide medical and dental benefits to Union-represented retirees covered by Plan C will not cause Taxpayer to include any amount in gross income under section 61.
- 3. The transfer of assets from the retiree life insurance reserve to the retiree health reserve in Trust, and the use of the transferred assets to provide retiree health benefits, will not result in any "disqualified benefit" within the meaning of section 4976(b)(1)(C), and will not, in and of itself, cause Taxpayer to be liable for the excise tax imposed by section 4976.

This ruling will be made available for public inspection under section 6110 after certain deletions of identifying information are made.
